

“The Gorge of the Columbia River from Crown Point on the Columbia River Highway”

National Chiropractic Journal 1948 (Mar); 18(3): 10; journal caption reads: "The great Bonneville dam in the Columbia River built at cost of more than $100,000,000 is a sight well worth seeing. Caption on back of photo reads: "The spillway at Bonneville Dam on the Columbia River, 42 miles east of Poulson, Oregon"

National Chiropractic Journal 1948 (Feb); 18(2): 21; journal caption reads: "Beatiful Mt. Hood - A Crowning Glory of Oregon." Caption on back of photo reads: "Mt. Hood, 11,245 feet high and Hood River Valley in Oregon"

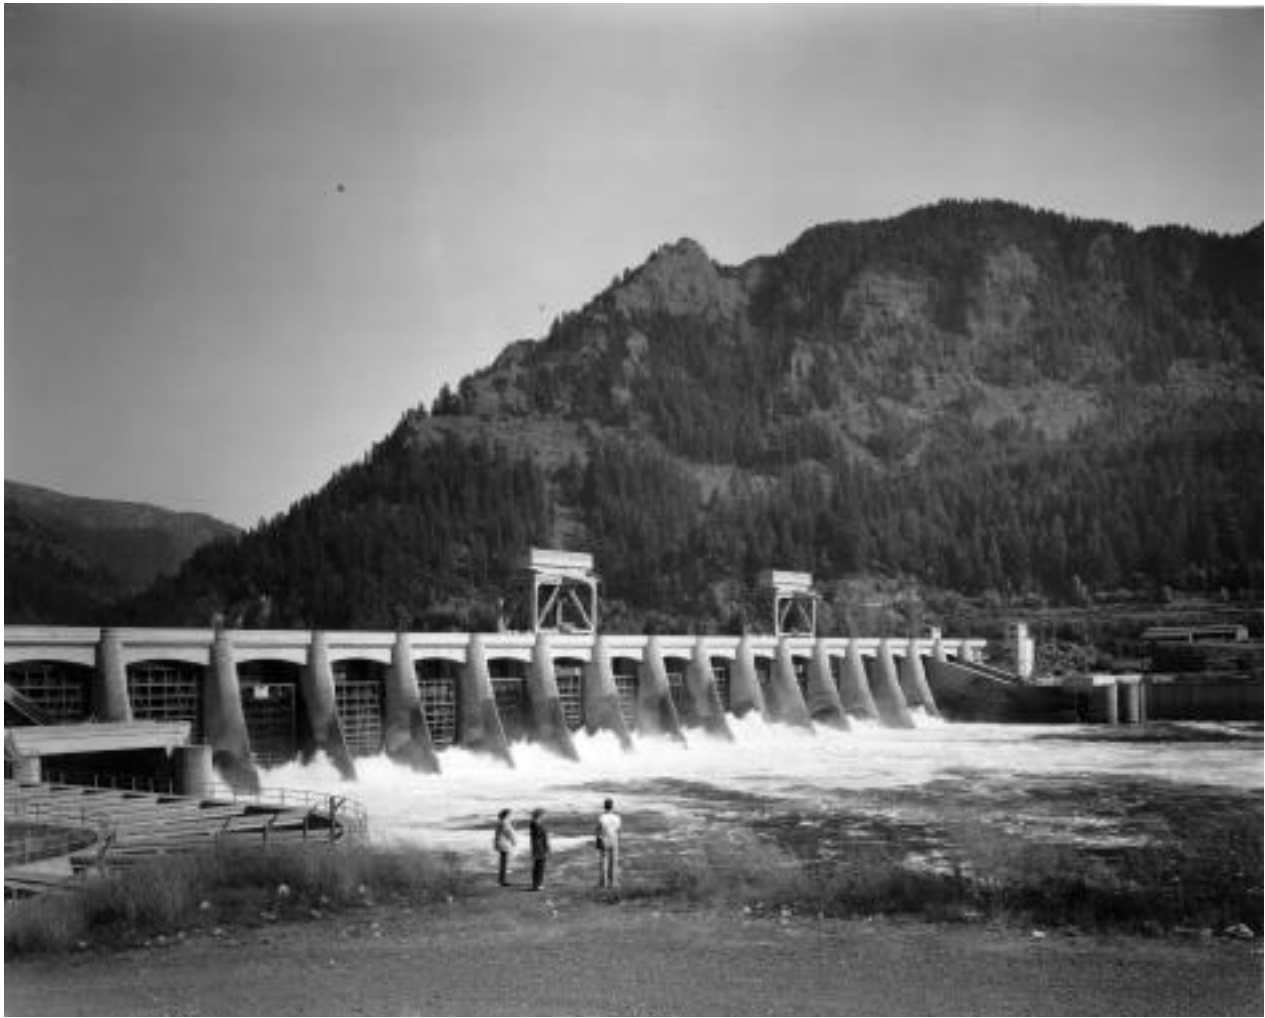

National Chiropractic Journal 1948 (Mar); 18(3): 9; journal caption reads: "Portland, the City of Roses, is a friendly, rambling, progressive city of homes and gardens. It is the hub and nerve center of Oregon and the vast Columbia empire which is rapidly becoming an important industrial city of the great Northwest." Caption on back of photo reads: "Portland, Ore. from Council Crest Hill. Willamette River in foreground. Mt. Hood (showing in white) on horizon"

National Chiropractic Journal 1948 (Mar); 18(3): 9; journal caption reads: "A panoramic view of beautiful Columbia River Gorge which stretches for nearly 200 miles from Portland." Caption on back of photo reads: "Columbia River Gorge from Columbia River Highway at Crown Point, Oregon, East of Portland, Ore." Appears again in National Chiropractic Journal 1948 (Apr); 18(4): 37

National Chiropractic Journal 1948 (Apr); 18(4): 36; journal caption reads: "Beautiful Multnomah Falls is an inspiring sight in the Columbia River Gorge." Caption on back of photo reads: "Multnomah Falls and Multnomah Lodge along Columbia River near Portland, in Oregon"

National Chiropractic Journal 1948 (Mar); 18(3): 10. Also appears in National Chiropractic Journal 1948 (Apr); 18(4): 37; journal caption reads: "The great Bonneville dam in the Columbia River built at cost of more than $100,000,00 is a sight well worth seeing." Caption on back of photo reads: "Bonneville Dam on Columbia River, near Portland"