

National Chiropractic Journal 1948 (May); 18(5): 36; journal caption reads: "A most inspiring view of beautiful Mount Hood standing as a sentinel guarding the friendly, rambling, progressive city of Portland, noted the world over for its beautiful homes and rose gardens." Caption on back of photo reads: "Portland, Oregon - Mt. Hood in background"

National Chiropractic Journal 1948 (Mar); 18(3): 10; journal caption reads: "Mt. Hood, lifting its hoary head 11,245 feet above sea level, stands like a sentinel over Columbia River gorge and is queen of the many snow capped peaks of the verdant, forest-clad Cascade mountains. Lost Lake is in the foreground." Caption on back of photo reads: "Mt. Hood and Lost Lake, Oregon"

National Chiropractic Journal 1948 (May); 18(5): 38; journal caption reads: "Serenity at its best is here depicted by fishermen at Lost Lake, near Portland. Note gigantic and gorgeous Mt. Hood in the back ground." Caption on back of photo reads: "Lost Lake, Mt. Hood in background. About 90 miles from Portland, Ore."

National Chiropractic Journal 1948 (May); 18(5): 35; journal caption reads: "A beautiful and peaceful scene that is only possible near the peaceful waters of the Pacific Ocean on Cannon Beach only a short drive from Portland - National Chiropractic Convention City." Caption on back of photo reads: "Cannon Beach, Oregon, on the Pacific"

National Chiropractic Journal 1948 (June); 18(6): cover. Hotel Multnomah (with whiteout borders)