"Mother in the solarium of the mansion" (Palmer, 1977, p. 182)

BJ the Indian Chief (Palmer, 1977, p. 155); Frank W. Elliott, D.C.

A vintage advertisement for The Palmer School and Infirmary of Chiropractic. The central text is written in a large, ornate, cursive font: "The Palmer School AND INFIRMARY OF CHIROPRACTIC (KI-RO-PRAK-TIK)". Below this, it says "ESTABLISHED 17 YEARS!" and "Davenport, Iowa, U.S.A." with "Private Office" underneath. The advertisement features two circular portraits: one of D.D. Palmer, labeled "DR. D. D. PALMER, INVENTOR AND DEVELOPER OF THE SYSTEM", and another of D.J. Palmer, labeled "D. J. PALMER, D.C., SECRETARY". To the right is an illustration of a large, multi-story building with a flag on top, labeled "COR. SECOND AND BRADY STS.". The background is filled with decorative flourishes, including a palm tree and architectural elements. At the bottom left, a small text block reads: "THIS SCHOOL HAS THE BEST COLLECTION OF PATHOLOGICAL AND ANOMALOUS SPECIMENS IN OSTEOLOGY OF ANY SCHOOL IN AMERICA."

Dave, BJ and Ralph Evans, D.C.
